IS IT RHEUMATISM?

Aren't You Really on the Wrong Track?

A good share of so-called rheumatism is caused by weak kidneys. When the kidneys fail to clear the blood of uric acid, the acid irritates the delicate nerves. Torturing pains dart through the affected part whenever it is moved. By strengthening the kidneys, Doan's Kidney Pills have proven their worth in thousands of so-called rheumatic cases, lumbago, sciatica, gravel, and urinary disorders. Doan's are well known in Norway and warmly recommended by Norway people. Read this Norway case:

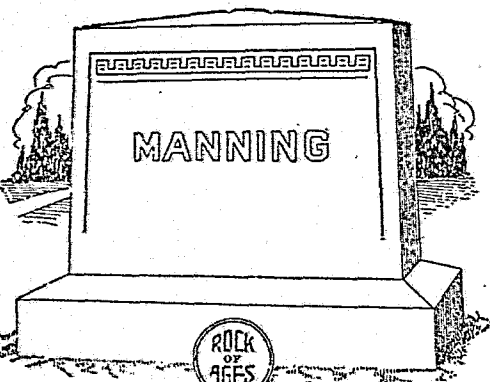

Mrs. F. L. Starbird of South Paris, who formerly lived in rear Beals Hotel, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been an old standby with me for years. At times my kidneys don't act as they should or my back aches. I often have blinding dizzy spells and rheumatic trouble when my finger joints seem to swell and are painful. I always use Doan's Kidney Pills at these times and they quickly relieve and cure me of the attack. I can't say enough in praise of Doan's."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Starbird had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE BRASS BAND FROM MUD CITY

There's not a band throughout the land, Can play an air or ditty, That'll move the toes Or bring forth cheers, Like The Brass Band from Mud City. There's the Saxophone And the Slide Trombone; There's nothing half so pretty As the music here, Of The Brass Band from Mud City. There's a Squash's Band With its name so grand, And there's Conway's, more's the pity; For they can't compete With this outfit meet— The Brass Band from Mud City. Hear the fellow strum On the Kettle Drum; It will purr just like a kitty. Since I was born, Never heard a horn Like the Bass Horn from Mud City. Oh, there's just one band In the old band stand, And the leader's quick and witty. They will bring a thrill To the other side of the town— That Brass Band from Mud City. —Carlton R. Mills, Fryeburg.

STOW

Old Bill Says Well we have got home from Court at South Paris and have taken a couple of long breaths, turned around twice and got located so that we will find ourselves Monday. We met a lot of men there and mixed with them for nearly 3 weeks and I will say that I hated to part with them and we would have taken a lesson and that was kept out of lawsuits if you want to save your shirt. We met Geo. Eastman and patronized him to the extent of a suit. We hadn't met for over thirty years and we were boys together. Now he is of the firm of Eastman & Andrews. We also met Gus Colby of Denmark another boyhood friend whom I had not met for thirty-five years. It makes us feel old when we reckon back over the years that are gone. We made some new friends such as C. E. Spring of Benfield, Harry Thomas of Denmark and Harry Trueworthy of Portland and I don't mean to let it go thirty years without seeing them. In fact I did not meet one juror but what I would be pleased to meet again.

We had a good homey boarding place at Mrs. Allen's on Skilling's Ave and it was kind of tough when we bid them goodbye and shook hands all around and wended our way homeward though we didn't see how we could stay any longer yet we disliked to part with men we both liked and respected.

Nellie Walker is fixing up her house at Stow Corner putting on a new piazza and a new roof and other improvements. D. P. Charles and Loren Eastman are doing the work.

We hear that Sidney Sanborn and Loren Sanborn have got to Boone, Iowa on their way to Colorado Springs, also that Loren seems better.

HARBOR Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hurd motored to South Paris Sunday and visited Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nason.

Several of the boys here attended the Harvest supper at East Conway Friday night.

Ralph Thompson is entertaining the Shingles.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Nason of South Paris were guests at H. Hurd's, Monday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Cash and baby of South Portland have been guests at C. W. Farrington's.

Roscoe Thompson has been finishing a room in Joe Bemis' house at Fryeburg Village.

The Academy students were home Thursday and Friday on account of the Teachers Institute.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Charles were in South Paris Saturday.

Members and friends of the church are preparing for a carnival, Nov. 10th and 11th. Sale of useful articles, Nov. 10th, baked bean supper and entertainment, Nov. 11th. Rev. J. W. Artus will give an address at 2 p. m., he will be accompanied by a gospel singer. There will be a vegetable supper and entertainment in the evening. The sale will continue Saturday afternoon.

NORTH FRYEBURG Family Reunion

A very pleasant party was entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bemis on Thursday, Oct. 26th. A bountiful dinner was prepared by Mrs. Bemis and a very pleasant afternoon was enjoyed.

Those present were Mrs. Alice Webb and daughter Alma, Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Webb, Mrs. Aurilla Webb of South Chatham, Mrs. Gertrude Libby of Norway and Mrs. Alice Walker of South Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thurston spent the past week with relatives in Boston.

Mrs. Langdon Andrews and daughter Ruth are spending a few weeks with her parents in North Edgecomb.

Mrs. Gertrude Libby of Norway, Mrs. Alice Walker of South Paris and Mrs. Aurilla Webb of South Chatham spent a few days the past week with Mrs. Alice Webb.

Mrs. W. H. Farrington and daughter Lois who have been stopping with Mrs. Laura Pitman of Stow have returned home.

Miss Bridges, our school teacher spent the week end at her home in Wilton.

KEZAR LAKE Dr. and Mrs. Caston accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Roland Stanley motored to Richmond Sunday to call on friends.

W. O. Merrifield has a radio installed in his home.

Mrs. Della Sawyer is ill with neuritis. The revival services inaugurated by Rev. Mr. Whiteley in the M. E. church will continue for two weeks commencing Oct. 30th. A socialist from Boston a Mr. Natfeger has been engaged for the occasion and hopes run high for a homeing of Rev. John Arters, the last week of the session.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Garner and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Garner have returned from a weeks stay in Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Fogg of Portland are guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Norton.

CASCO Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Edwards have gone to Florida to spend the winter also Mr. and Mrs. Hamden Tripp and their daughter Agnes and her husband and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Skidmore.

The 1923 Six Cylinder Seven Passenger Sedan—$2195

A dignified beauty and richness unexcelled by any closed car mark the new Buick seven passenger sedan.

Lengthening the body, lowering the top and raising both hood and radiator have improved the streamline appearance made possible by the long wheel base, and added attractiveness has been given by the handsome nickle-plated drum-type head and cowl lamps.

The roomy Fisher built body is furnished in rich plush. Deep cushioned seats for five with two comfortable folding chairs accommodate seven grown persons with ample room for everyone.

The chassis has been improved materially, and its easy riding qualities heightened by a new rear spring suspension.

In the famous Buick Valve-in-Head engine, changes also have been made to increase its dependable performance.

In every detail of body, chassis and power plant, this Sedan has no superiors among closed cars of even greater price.

Pressure Lubrication of Bearings
The center main bearings of the Buick Valve-in-Head engine are lubricated by oil under a constant pressure from a gear pump, insuring a film of oil at all times between the bearing surfaces. The pump also forces a volume of oil directly into the crank case at each connecting rod pocket making certain perfect lubrication of these bearings also.

BIBLE THOUGHTS

For This Week

A morning prayer: Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.—Psalm 51:10.

Friday

Gospel of Christ:—I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek.—Romans 1:16.

Saturday

How Beautiful—How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!—Romans 10:15.

Sunday

Saving Grace:—By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves it is the gift of God.—Ephesians 2:8.

Monday

Free Grace:—Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.—Hebrews 4:16.

Tuesday

Grace and Knowledge:—Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. To Him be glory both now and for ever.—2 Peter 3:18.

Wednesday

To see the Lord:—Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord.—Hebrews 12:14.

Thursday

Grace and Peace:—This Lord make his face shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee: the Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace.—Numbers 6:25, 26.

EAST BETHEL

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Newton were Sunday guests of relatives at Andover.

Guests recently entertained by Mrs. J. H. Swan were Mr. and Mrs. Pearl Mason, Mr. and Mrs. F. Horless, Mr. Ward Scribner and Frank Oleson of Medford, Mass., also J. Channey and son of Massachusetts.

Vera Hutchins of Andover were last week's guests of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Newton.

Mrs. Octavia Bean has closed her home here and is the guest of Mrs. E. Merrill, Bethel.

The Misses Laura and Maud Cummings teachers, and the School League held a box supper, dance and entertainment at Grange Hall, Saturday evening, Oct. 28, the hall was beautifully decorated, many Jack-o-lanterns and fierce looking black cats being much in evidence. Homemade candy and popcorn both also a booth with a young old witch fortune teller was well patronized by a large crowd who greatly enjoyed it all. Eldridge of Bethel furnished lively music for dancing and all proved a great success.

Porter Farwell is one of our oldest and smartest farmers. He cultivates a large farm, is a progressive farmer and enjoys his occupation. He has a ten acre lot specialized to sweet corn on which he spends much time. He recently spread on this lot 100 loads of dressing, which he handled himself in six days.

NEWRY

Mr. and Mrs. George Ourett of East Hardwick, Vt. have returned to their home after spending a few days with friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Haines from West Paris were at their camp a few days the last of the week.

H. G. Bryant of Bethel is hauling wood for Will Walker at Rumford Point.

WEST POLAND

Mrs. Nellie Storer
The people in this community were shocked and saddened by the death of Nellie Storer, Oct. 21st. She had been a great sufferer for several months. Mrs. Storer leaves a husband, William Storer, and son Clarence, also several brothers and sisters to mourn their loss.

Funeral services were held at the home Tuesday at 1:30 P. M., Rev. Purington of Mechanic Falls spoke words of comfort. There were many beautiful flowers. Burial at Megquier Hill Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Felker were in Mechanic Falls, Sunday.

Emily Keene has been having a vacation from Gould's Academy and has been at home a few days.

Norris Evelith and family of Kennebunk were recent visitors at Senator B. M. Fernald's.

Several in this vicinity are suffering from bad colds. Charles Emery has been sick, but is now gaining.

Mrs. Ralph Robinson recently received a visit from her mother, Mrs. Plummer of Raymond.

LOVELL

The supper Saturday-night at Masonic Hall for the benefit of the library was a success as it was a fine one and a good crowd.

A. A. Stearns has taken the timber on the Irish lot of True Walker & Heald to cut and haul to the river.

Carlton Nevers has cut the bushes and taken up the stone posts by the side of the road on the farm he bought of D. W. True and will plow the ground and seed it down.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harmon are in Worcester, Mass., visiting their son, L. E. Harmon. P. R. Charles has charge of the farm and stock while they are away.

Charles Berry has been cutting wood for Frank Harmon the past week. They have the timber all saved at the mill, and it is closed down until Spring.

Rev. H. C. Ide Returned From Europe
Rev. H. C. Ide, pastor of the Congregational church at Redlands, Cal., has returned from a European trip extending over four months.

Rev. Mr. Ide is well known in this section, where he enjoys the vacations in his cottage on Lake Kezar. The following extract from the Redlands paper outlines the interesting journey taken by the pastor and his wife.

The travelers landed in Plymouth, England. They greatly enjoyed a few days stay at the university towns of Cambridge and Oxford and visited many places of great interest to them. They spent a few days in London sightseeing and then went to France.

They visited Paris and then went to Amiens and spent about a week in a trip over the French battle front. The travelers journeyed to Belgium and found great activity in rebuilding, this being done as money can be secured for it. They visited Brussels, Bruges, Ghent, Ypres and then went to Cologne and up to the occupied zone of Germany.

From Cologne they went to Mainz, or Mayence as it is generally written, on a steamer up the Rhine. They spent the day in this trip and had a visit at Mayence and went overland to Frankfurt and then to Heidelberg, home of the most famous old university in Germany. They inspected the university buildings and saw many souvenirs of famous Germans who attended school there.

A day was spent in Nuremberg, the quaint old town where so many of the world's toys are made. Then they traveled to Munich and down to the little Bavarian village of Oberammergau and attended the Passion Play. The little village is crowded with tourists and the Passion Play is a wonderful thing. Then they went to Switzerland and visited Lake Constance and then through the St. Gotthard tunnel, the most famous in Italy, to Lake Como, the most beautiful lake in Italy, its shores lined with marvelous villas set high on the cliffs. Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome and Naples were visited with many side trips to places of interest. From Naples they sailed to Almeria, Spain, where they saw many immigrants board the ship and also 21,000 barrels of Malaga grapes for the Christmas trade in this country. The grapes are brought down from the mountain vineyards to the seaport town in great hampers on the backs of donkeys. They then sailed to the Azores and landed in Boston a few days later.

Rev. Mr. Ide visited in the east about two weeks before returning to California.

OXFORD

Surprise Party

A surprise awaited the young ladies of the Montrose Study Society at their regular Friday evening meeting. They were met at the door by a ghost who simply greeted them by extending a cold, wet hand and shaking hands. A skeleton's face was represented in the hall in place of the regular light.

As soon as the members assembled, the regular business meeting was held and the entertainment was in the form of a Halloween Social. Games consisted of Halloween stunts and fortune telling.

Assortments of grapefruit, assorted nuts, fudge and cakes were served in the dining room. Later in the evening they returned to the Society Room, which was all dark except a weird light from the fireplace. They sat on the floor telling ghost stories, toasting marshmallows, eating apples, nuts and popcorn. Both the Society Room and the dining room were decorated in the Halloween favors, napkins, cats and Jack-o-lanterns.

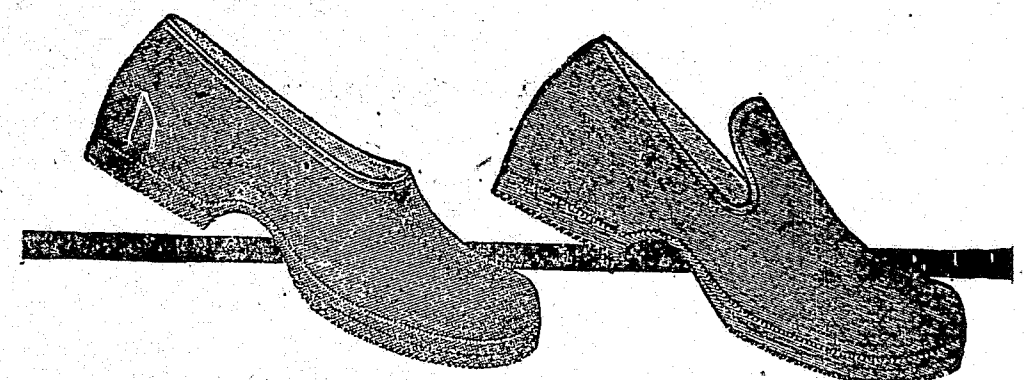

Those present were Nellie Poole, Florence Perkins, Ethel Dunbar, Hazel Treblecock, Winzola Bonney and Winetta Frye.

Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Delano motored to Bridgton on Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Eliza Farwell, who had been visiting relatives in Bridgton, returned with them.

Mr. and Mrs. George Sieders of Portland were in town, Sunday.

Percy Whitney and family went to Bethel Saturday afternoon to visit Mrs. Whitney's sister.

Mr. B. C. Roberts G. A. R. Post and W. R. C. held a campfire on Thursday, which was largely attended, delegations being present from South Paris, Mechanic Falls, Norway and Waterford, also Department Commander Day and wife and other ladies from Augusta. An after dinner program was carried out. Commander A. J. Holden of Roberts Post, presiding, who gave a short talk in appreciation of the work of the W. R. C. and also called upon representatives of other Posts and Corps who responded with appropriate remarks. Commander Day gave a 15 minute address which was greatly enjoyed by those present, after which the company adjourned to Robinson Hall where moving pictures were shown of war views.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

According to a statement just issued by Edsel B. Ford, President of the Ford Motor Company, Detroit, a general reduction of $50.00 a car has been made in the prices of Ford model "T" cars and the Ford one-ton Truck, effective October 17th.

"The revision in prices," said Mr. Ford, "is the result of the increased volume of business which our company has enjoyed during the present year, and also, to the fact that we now own and operate many of our own sources of raw material, which enables us to continue increasing the quality of our product and at the same time keep the price so low that Ford cars are in reach of everybody."

"Our production for 1922 is already in excess of a million, which has been an important factor in bringing down costs. Our present daily output is averaging better than 5,000 cars and trucks, which means a complete Ford car or truck every 5½ seconds of each eight-hour working day. It is in anticipation of this continued demand that price adjustments are again being made in order to keep in effect the policy of selling Ford products at the lowest price consistent with quality."

"Quality, as usual," said Mr. Ford, "will continue to be a prime consideration in the building of Ford cars. As our business has increased we have consistently increased our equipment and manufacturing facilities, so that this price reduction merely reflects the progressive methods which come as a result of increased volume."

"This reduction, which is the sixth since March, 1920, brings the price of the Ford Touring Car from $575, the price in effect early in 1920, to the present extremely low level of $298, which is nearly 50 per cent. less. Corresponding reductions have been made on all other types."

The new prices by types follows:

	F. O. B. Factory
Touring .....	$298
Roadster .....	$269
Chassis .....	$235
Coupe .....	$530

The Laxative with 72 Years' Reputation
For The Whole Family

Dr. True's Elixir

The True Family Laxative

Mothers with their home worries are often irregular at meals—have no appetite—are often restless at night—are tired and are troubled with distressed stomachs—need a prompt, pure herb laxative, and such is Dr. True's Elixir, the True Family Laxative. The working man is apt to neglect his health; may eat too hurriedly and at irregular hours. Often this puts the bowels out of order—they fail to function properly—causing fretfulness, talking away the appetite, slowing down the active mind. To relieve these conditions, have a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir handy.

Use it as others have done during the past 70 years.

When the children are out of sight they often eat too many sweets or rich foods. This brings on constipation in many cases.

Watch these symptoms: Constipation, sour stomach, cramps, eyes heavy and dull, bad breath, restlessness, and biliousness. These are common to both children and grown-ups and call for prompt use of a laxative. Mrs. F. E. Smith, 112 Huntington Ave., Boston, says: "I have been taking Dr. True's Elixir for constipation and find it to be more effective than anything I have ever used."

Use the True Family Laxative, Dr. True's Elixir. 40c, 60c, $1.20.

NEW HAMPSHIRE WHITE PINE BLISTER

Sometime in September D. S. Curtis of the Maine Forestry Service was in this section on an inspection for white pine blister. Whether he found infected pine lots we are unable to say. Undoubtedly he did.

We copy from a New Hampshire paper conditions as found in Belknap County. We trust it is not as bad in this section, but it is well to be on the look out.

"At the present time the most serious problem, as far as disease is concerned is the men of the white pine blister rust. Unless prompt action is taken to control its spread, a resultant damage far beyond the expectations of the most conservative can be looked for. It is possible for all who read these words to witness the destruction of our white pine growth. The White Pine Blister Rust is a most disease which lives in the inner bark of the white pine trees and on the leaves of all kinds of currant and gooseberry bushes. It has no connection with animal or insect life. It is one of several rusts, etc., that must have two kinds of plants on which to live before becoming fully developed.

In the spring of the year it shows up in the form of blisters on infected pine. These blisters are filled with fine, dustlike spores, as they are sometimes called, which will grow only on the leaves of currant and gooseberry bushes. As these blisters ripen and open up, the wind carries the seeds from the pine to the currant and gooseberry bushes. Within two weeks of the time the seeds come in contact with the currant and gooseberry bushes bright orange-yellow blisters appear on the under side of the leaves. The dustlike spores formed within will grow only on currant and gooseberry leaves and are spread from bush to bush by the wind. From July on, the late summer stage begins to appear on the bushes. It is recognized by the presence of orange brown hair like columns on the under surface of the leaves. The spores from these columns will grow only on five needed pines, such as our native white pines.

Blister cannot spread from one pine to the other without first going to either a currant or gooseberry bush. The blister rust seeds produced in the pines may be blown 10 to 15 miles or more and grow when they fall on currant and gooseberry leaves. It is because of this fact that currant and gooseberry bushes are a constant source of danger to white pines, even though there are no diseased trees for miles around. While under ordinary conditions pines may be secure from the rust if currant and gooseberry are from 900 to 1000 feet distant, still there are cases where the disease has been known to infect from bushes more than a mile away.

White pine blister rust has no respect for age or size. Both the young and the old are susceptible to the disease.

The rust is known to be present in all the New England states and New York, Wisconsin, Minnesota and was very recently found in the State of Washington. It has also been found in the Province of Ontario and British Columbia, Canada.

It is also present in European countries and found its way into North America through the importation of white pine nursery stock.

In our state the condition is very serious. In 1915 the disease was known to be in one pine lot in the state. To-day it has been located in over 160 towns in the state. What will be the conditions seven years from now if immediate action isn't taken? There are a number of seriously infected areas through the state, viz, Temple, the disease has spread over an area of two square miles; Littleton, in which town a recent survey proved that blister was in every section of the township; Deerfield, where the trees in an area of 30 acres were found to be 50 to 100 per cent. diseased and a continuous area of 150 acres in which the disease was found to be general. There are also 30 other towns where the disease covers acres.

White pine blister rust has found every town in Belknap County. The most serious infections found to date were in the towns of Alton, Barnstead and Gilman. Over 6,000 acres of pine land has been protected this season from the rust by removing over 180,000 wild and cultivated currant and gooseberry bushes in Alton.

It is possible this section is not infected, but we doubt it. If interested to know, write the Maine Forestry Service, Augusta, Me. They can tell you the remedy.

EARLY POTTERIES OF OXFORD, MAINE

Some little time ago our mutual friend D. Crommett Clark, made an inquiry through the Advertiser for information of the pottery business formerly carried on in the Webber Neighborhood in Oxford. The writer of this article was born and brought up about a mile from where the factory was located, and can well remember its activities more than seventy years ago. The most important manufacturer was David Webber, who lived on a farm now owned by Simeon K. Yeaton, near the Webber schoolhouse, where his large family was raised.

It is not known where Mr. Webber learned the trade, or just what time he came to Oxford, but old account books kept by Flavel Bartlett of Oxford in 1821 establish the fact that he was engaged in the pottery business at that time. His factory was located about 20 rods west of the house, on the road leading to Norway Village, and the old factory building was standing unused about thirty or more years ago.

The clay was dug from a pit a few rods south of the dwelling house, where some years later, Mr. Webber's son, Moses, was extensively engaged in the manufacture of brick. This clay is said to be of excellent quality for the manufacture of pottery ware. During the busy season he employed quite a number of men in addition to his regular force. He employed each year for a few weeks, an expert potter by the name of Arthur Morse, who lived in Hallowell. This man did nothing but turn out pottery ware and his hands were as soft as a baby's. He would never do anything that would cause his hands to be calloused, and thus interfere with good work. The writer well remembers watching him with great interest, taking a lump of clay, and wondering whether it would turn out a milk pan, a jug, or a bean pot. It was very fascinating to watch his deft fingers so rapidly turning out works of art. The articles were then taken to the upper story of the building to dry out thoroughly before being fired.

The kiln in which the articles were fired was built out on the north end of the building and was of brick, some 15 by 20 feet square. As soon as the first snows came, several teams started out loaded up with the goods manufactured during the summer, and delivered them to the traders in the neighboring villages. Milk pans, jugs, bean pots, jars and many other articles were made and found a ready sale.

The growing importation of white crockery was founded the death knell of this important industry and the business gradually died out before 1880. Mr. Webber's son, Henry Rust Webber, learned the trade and worked with his father for several years. After this, Rust married a sister of T. Jeff-Whitehead, of Turkey Ridge, Paris, and for a few years ran a small pottery there procuring the clay from the Webber pit in Oxford.

A man by the name of Sampson who lived on the place where John Ordway once made brick, ran a very small pottery, doing most of the work himself. David Webber was a man of more than ordinary ability. The business he carried on was large for the times, and he showed good business judgment. He was a good citizen and a good neighbor, but was very outspoken, saying what he had to say fearlessly. He was somewhat eccentric in his habits. He would never have any heels on his boots or shoes, saying that if the Lord had intended to have a big bunch on a man's heels, he would have put it on when he made him. He died August 15, 1861, and his remains lie buried in the little cemetery a few rods north of where most of his busy and useful life was spent.

The writer of this has several articles which were made in this factory, some of which are works of art.

WORK

Vacations are ended. Schools are opening. For most people the working year begins early in September. In a sense everyone goes to school. We work or shirk, submit to discipline, perform a dozen and one tasks we would like to avoid and in the main are rewarded according to our deserts.

Teachers tell their pupils through the day that they will get out of school in the form of useful training for life about what they put into it in work, in devotion to duty, in responsiveness to suggestion and in faithfulness to ideals. The same is true of all of us, and the farther removed we are from the day of our emergence from school the more obvious the fact becomes.

In school or out it is work that counts. The world needs to realize anew that progress is founded on honest industry. The shirker is a parasite, reaping where others sow, claiming rewards for other people's toil.

With all its serious ills the world would recover soon and prosper like a garden of the gods if every individual in every country would take to himself as a personal matter the gospel of hard work. The world needs as never before men, women and children who appreciate the usefulness and dignity of labor.

The wealth of society, the whole accumulated total of the world's physical possessions, is built on toil. Work tames the wilderness, brings deserts into civilization, builds cities, connects them with railroads and steamship lines and carries on the manifold activities of civilization. Capital is merely the reward of labor accumulated and put to service. Back of it lies the hard, back-breaking toil of thousands of men and women. Without labor there would be no capital and orderly society would be impossible.

The most useful thing anyone can do is to work, whether he be in school or elsewhere, whether the work be with hand or brain or both, regardless of what the immediate reward may be, regardless of what one's thoughtless contemporaries may think. America prospered because from its earliest years Americans knew the importance of work. When a ruthless Russian minority declared war on industry ruin followed inevitably.

Let us make this new work year the best in many. Wherever the individual task is found, let us give it the same earnest attention, the same enthusiastic devotion that our fathers gave to their more primitive tasks. The world is sick. Work will cure it.

DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Herself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also. I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCH SILVIA, 69 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

It's the same story—one friend telling another of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas the great Shepherd has again entered our midst and removed from our Order Bro. William H. King, therefore

Be it resolved: That in the death of Bro. King, Sweden Grange loses one of its oldest and most respected members.

While not an active member, we have every reason to believe that he had the best interest of our Order at heart.

Resolved: That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved daughter and family.

Resolved: That a copy of these Resolutions be sent to Sister Mary Hutchins, a copy be spread upon our records, and a copy sent to the Norway Advertiser for publication. Also that our Charter be draped in mourning for thirty days.

Good Morning!

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

It had been a pleasant day and evening for Muriel Delevan, and she was content to linger upon the porch and dream over the various events that had made her nineteenth birthday a red letter event in her life. There had been tennis all the afternoon and music and dancing until eleven o'clock and now, nearing the mystic hour of midnight, the last guest had departed.

Old Abel Strong, the gardener and general major domo, had retired after a final survey of the grounds. Mrs. Walters, the housekeeper, was going upstairs to her room when Rose, the younger sister, came out and sat down in Muriel's lap and put her arms lovingly about her neck.

"Tired, dear?" she cooed in gentle, soothing tones.

"No, just lost in happy dreams," came the low murmured reply. "I think I shall never forget this great, lovely day of my life."

"Do you think Rodney Blair will, either?" mischievously inquired Rose.

"Oh, I don't know," replied Muriel in an ecstasy of emotion, but he was so kind and thoughtful and almost sentimental."

"And he stole away from the others in your stroll about the grounds. Why, you palpitating, ecstatic little humbug, you are in love with him and afraid to think it."

"Now, Rose—"

"No, now Muriel!" disputed Rose, "you are to come to bed at once. You know we promised papa early this morning while he was away and here it is going towards one o'clock. Come, dear, and Rose led her sister into the house and they went up stairs.

Rose was yawning and sleepy, but she indulged her sister in not hurrying her from a final survey of the numerous gifts she had received. There was a diamond ring from her father and a handsome wrist watch from her Aunt Dorothy. There were minor articles of jewelry from her girl friends and there was a bouquet from Rodney Blair which she had placed upon the little stand at the head of the bed.

Muriel stole a glance at Rose who had already retired, noticed that she was asleep, selected a bud from the bouquet and turned out the light and tipped softly to the open window. She pressed the cherished flower to her lips and looked out upon the garden. Life seemed still and sweet, the zephyrs blew gently down a vale of bloom. There seemed to be a rare magic where the moon, shining through the trees, illuminated dells of fairy light. She was lost in maiden reverie until a wavy glow of light showed, disappeared, moving about from spot to spot beyond a long row of stately lilies.

Instantly Muriel thought of some lurking murderer. She recalled that her absent father always kept money and securities in the library safe. Then, too, a sudden inestimable value to her cherished present was presented to her active mind. She swept the jewelry from the stand into a drawer and quietly left the room. Abel Strong, the gardener slept in an attic over the kitchen. She reached its door and tapped.

"What is it?" at length sounded a sleepy voice.

"Please get up at once," answered Muriel. "Some one is prowling about the garden—some one with a flashlight."

Abel came out in a few moments—a pistol in either coat pocket. Muriel related what she had seen.

"You stay on the porch here, Miss," spoke Abel finally. "I will leave one of the pistols and if the light comes near the house fire it off as a signal to me."

It was an exciting and suspenseful five minutes for Muriel. The flashes of light had ceased, there was an interminable silence and then approaching voices sounded and the gardener and another came into shadowy view. Muriel stepped to the door, reached in and turned on the porch light.

She stood spellbound as the illumination revealed the gardener and Rodney Blair. The latter held a flashlight in one hand, in the other a long, flat wallet.

"If you please, Miss," spoke the gardener, "the gentleman says he will explain to you about his being here," and with a slight smile on his face went away around the house.

"Why, won't you be seated?" he belatedly uttered Muriel.

"I must be an unwelcome intruder, causing you such an unwarranted alarm," said Blair, equally confused.

"When we—that is, in the stroll about the garden last evening I must have dropped a letter from my pocket. It was one I had written to my mother and, Miss Delavan, let me make a full confession. It was all about you. Perhaps the clearest thing to do is to ask you to read it."

With growing emotion Muriel perused the missive in which Blair told his mother of his love for her and asking if she would welcome the loveliest girl in the world as a daughter-in-law if he could win her.

Rose Delavan was a heavy sleeper, but she had awakened at the echo of voices. She had gone to the window of her room and peered down at the porch wondering.

"Oh, I am surely dreaming," she fluttered, for on its lower step Rodney Blair was kissing the hand of her sister in a tender.

"Good night, my love!"

"Good morning, you mean!" cried the irrepressible Rose and Muriel ran into the house, aflame with happy blushes.

When it comes to politics, everyone is prejudiced.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By Mary Graham Bonner

THE CHICKENS.

"Hello," said Charlie Chicken.

"Hello," said Chal Chicken.

"What are you picking up your feathers for?" asked Charlie.

"What are you?" asked Chal.

"I'll tell you if you'll tell me," said Charlie.

"And I'll tell you if you'll tell me, so it is quite fair all around," said Chal.

"Well," said Charlie, "well, cluck, cluck, you know what it is that people think about us when we pick our feathers."

"I will tell you, cluck, cluck, if you will tell me what you have in mind that people think about us," said Chal.

"All right, cluck-cluck," said Charlie.

"They say," he continued, "that if we go under cover it will be a fine day but that if we come out and pick our feathers it will be rainy."

"Just what I had in mind too," said Chal. "Cluck-cluck, just what I had in mind."

"Now, you know," said Charlie, "that often is very, very true."

"In fact we have done that so often and so have other chickens that everyone has almost come to believe that it is always true."

"But it's not always true. For example I don't feel as though it were going to rain now and yet I picked my feathers nice and clean from the dust and gave myself a good clean, dry bath."

"Just what I was doing," said Chal. "Cluck-cluck, it doesn't feel like rain to me."

"You see, when it feels like rain as a rule, we do something like this. But it doesn't always feel like rain. We usually fix our feathers up when it is going to rain just as folks will take a rainy day off to do a lot of odd chores and mending that they haven't done on the fine days."

"Only instead of our waiting for the rain to come we begin before it does come when we feel it in the air."

"But this was one of the times when I didn't feel it and so I just looked after my feathers because I felt in the mood to do it."

"What do you mean by feeling in the mood to do it?" asked Charlie.

"Cluck-cluck, that is something I don't understand."

"Cluck-cluck then, I will explain it to you," said Chal. "When I am in a mood for a thing it means I am feeling like that thing. When I'm in the mood to fix my feathers it means I feel like fixing my feathers, cluck-cluck, see?"

"Very clearly do I see," said Charlie.

"Grand sentence that, cluck-cluck," said Chal.

"It's going to be fine and yet we're not going under cover," said Charlie.

"At least I am not perfectly sure of the weather but I am pretty sure that it is not going to rain."

"I am pretty sure of it too," said Chal.

"I like to get up high to roost," said Charlie, "but I am still so young that it is very difficult to do so. We are so small, both of us that we can't get up high to roost."

"That's so," said Chal, "and wasn't it a joke the other day on the people?"

"You mean what we did?" asked Charlie.

"Yes, cluck-cluck," said Chal, "I did think that was a great old joke."

"Of course you see I couldn't get up any higher than the clothes line and I wanted to roost somewhere and so did you and so did the rest of the chicks."

"So we thought it was very comfortable up there. We had a little bit of trouble getting up the pole but once we were there it was really lovely."

"But it was funny for the people afterwards said we had been sitting on the clean clothes which had just been washed and we had thought they had just made it nice for us like that, though we wouldn't have cared if it hadn't been so nice."

"That was the best of the joke, for they thought that it was such a pity we had sat on the clean clothes and we would have been just as happy sitting on the line without the clothes. They were much more concerned about their clean clothes than they should have been—thinking we cared about them so much. We wouldn't have cared about them so much. We wouldn't have cared in the least whether they had been there or not."

"Yes, they did think a lot of those clean clothes, but we didn't, not in the least. That's why we sat on them, ha, ha, cluck-cluck."

There are so many liars in the world now days that one can't even believe old reports.

Norway Grange

The prophet and regulator of Norway Grange arranged for a beautiful Nov. 28th. The anniversary of the Grange organization and the sky smiled and, well the patrons smiled to. Worthy Master Richardson called to order at 11 a. m. The meeting was open in form with opening song "Hither Comes" (Grange melodies), a short business session was conducted and as this was the forty-eight anniversary of Norway Grange they had thought it well to unite Paris, Hebron and Oxford Granges to help celebrate the joyous occasion and incidentally celebrate their birthdays as Paris Hebron and Oxford Granges were organized in 1874 and the way the members of the invited granges responded is proof of the strong fraternal bond.

The Worthy Master then called on Brother Austin Stearns Master of Paris Grange who gave an interesting talk. He was followed by Brother Barrett, Master of Oxford Grange, Hebron, and by Brooks and Richard Gates of Paris and Bro. Ellingwood of West Paris Granges. A recess was declared for dinner. Worthy Chaplain Rev. O. B. Barnard pronounced a beautiful blessing and all enjoyed a beautiful feast.

The meeting was again called to order at 1:30 p. m. and declared an open meeting so all could enjoy the program. Worthy Master Richardson gave a word and heartfelt welcome and spoke of the desire to have these sister Granges meet with them and it was a sincere welcome from the hearts of the members of Norway Grange. Especially did he speak of how important the help of the young members, and what opportunities are afforded them at this time for advancement in all the walks of life.

Brother Howard Smith, the only charter member of the order present spoke of Norway Grange in the early years. He was a member of Oxford Grange. Bro. Smith prefaced his remarks with an expression of uncertainty as to where he was at (just think of it) but gave one of his delightful instructive talks. Bro. J. S. Brown of Paris Grange followed with a short talk and then gave a history of Paris Grange since its organization, October 24th, 1874 which was interesting to all, for it was an account of progress and well merited success with pleasure combined. Bro. C. H. George of Hebron Grange gave a brief history of the work of the Grange and in a few minutes told of instructing candidates in the old days and the benefits received by him during his long membership and also what it does for all members of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry. Sister Addie Danforth gave a cordial word that was much appreciated. Bro. W. S. Stearns of Paris Grange responded to his name with remarks of much interest as he has long been a member of the Order. The meeting was placed in the hands of the Worthy Lecturer Sister Edith Knightly who presented the following program:

Instrumental Music . . . . . Sister Alice Gammon

Masses Pike (bones), Dunham (violin).

Sister Noble, piano.

Poem "Our Grange Birthday" . . . . . Louise Gammon

Reading "Barrett, master of Oxford Grange, Encores, 'Last Days of Pompeii' . . . . .

Song, "Working on the Railroad" . . . . .

Reading, "Old Farmer's Year" . . . . .

Freeland Cummings of Paris Grange. Encores.

Original Anniversary Poem . . . . .

A fine expression of sentiment and solidarity.

Reading, "Medley" . . . . .

Piano Solo, encores . . . . . Sister Alice Gammon

Question: How to hold young people as members into the future.

Answered by Sister Edith Knightly, followed by Sister Tyner of Oxford Grange and Brother Barrett.

Instrumental Music . . . . . Dennis Pike

Mattie Dunham and Charlie Noble

What community work has been done in the several Granges was generally responded to and much good work reported. Sister Annie Dudley, Sister Hunting, Sisters Brett and Tyner reported.

Recommendations from the Worthy Master on work done by members to help Grange work followed. He also announced that Commissioner of Agriculture F. H. Washburn will meet with Norway Grange the first meeting in November. Minutes read, the meeting closed in form.

The occasion was one long to be remembered by all present and no thought of anything but happiness was introduced to mar

CONDENSED CLASSICS

THE NEWCOMES

By WILLIAM M. THACKERAY

Condensation by Charles K. Bolton,
Librarian of the Boston Athenaeum

William Makepeace Thackeray, son of a civil servant in India, was born July 18, 1811, in Calcutta. He died Dec. 24, 1863, in London, where most of his life was spent. From 1840 on his wife was insane, so there lived in his heart, as in that of the other great humorist of his day, Dickens, constant sorrow.

Thackeray began in school days rather to absorb life than to attain it. He was a scholar, a wit, a caricaturist, an Cambridge, in Westminster, in Paris at schools and London law school, he was a gayly on his way, indolent in study but eager in friendship, ardent in life. At twenty-one he owned and managed a London newspaper, at twenty-five he was penniless, after scattering a comfortable fortune. But he had bought experience invaluable to the young journalist, priceless to the novelist.

Thackeray's astonishing versatility was early realized. He aspired to illustrate Dickens' novels; he wrote travel sketches, stories, ballads and burlesques. "Barry Lyndon," his first notable novel, was the history of a rascal; but, in the most fascinating of feminine rascals, Becky Sharp, Thackeray first brilliantly showed himself master of the creation of living character ("Vanity Fair," 1847-48). "Pendennis" (1848-49) was, like Dickens' "David Copperfield," in essence autobiographical. The need of money drove Thackeray reluctantly to the lecture hall. His course on Eighteenth Century Humorists, popular in England and America (1851), prepared the ground for "Pendennis" (1852), his unsurpassed historical novel. "The Newcomes" (1855), "The Virginians" (1859), and the unfinished "Dennis Duval" complete the list of his best novels.

COL. THOMAS NEWCOME, the hero of Argom, and of Bhatpour, had loved the beautiful Leonore de Blois, but having incurred the wrath of his stepmother, he fled to India to carve out his career. There he married the widow, Mrs. Casey, and a few years later sent their son Clive to England. He regaled the ladies of the regiment with Clive's letters; sporting young men would give or take odds that the colonel would mention Clive's name once before five minutes, or three times in ten minutes. But those who laughed at Clive's father laughed very kindly.

At last the happy time came for which the colonel had been longing, and he took leave of his regiment. In England he had in his family circle two half brothers, Sir Brian, who had married Lady Ann, daughter of the Earl of Kew, and Hobson Newcome.

One morning at breakfast while Sir Brian champed his dry toast, Barnes, the son, said to his sister Ethel: "My uncle, the colonel of sepoy, and his amiable son have been paying a visit to Newcome."

"You are always sneering about our uncle," broke in Ethel, "and saying unkind things about Clive. Our uncle is a dear, good, kind man, and I love him."

At Hobson Newcome's and elsewhere the family party often assembled, the colonel, his friend Mr. Binnie and Binnie's sister, Mrs. Mackenzie with her daughter Rosey, Sir Brian and Lady Ann, and Clive who had become a painter. From one of these parties Clive and I, his friend Arthur Pendennis, walked with the usual Havana to light up home. "I can't help thinking," said the astute Clive, "that they fancied I was in love with Ethel. Now, I suppose, they think I am engaged to Rosey. She is as good a little creature as can be, and never out of temper, though I fancy Mrs. Mackenzie tries her."

Time passed and our Mr. Clive went to Baden, where he found old Lady Kew with her granddaughter Ethel. "You have no taste for pictures, only for painters, I suppose," said Lady Kew one day to Ethel.

"I was not looking at the picture," said Ethel, "but at the little green ticket in the corner. I think, grandmother," she said, "we young ladies in the world ought to have little green tickets pinned on our backs, with 'sold' written on them."

Barnes Newcome, too, was at Baden, for he was to marry pretty Lady Clara Pulley, free at last from that undesirable Jack Belsize, Lord Highgate's son. Lady Kew had plans which Clive's growing regard for his cousin Ethel put in jeopardy.

"My good young man, I think it is time you were off," Lady Kew said to Clive with great good humor. "I have been to see that poor little creature to whom Captain Belsize behaved so cruelly. She does not care a fig for him—not one fig. She is engaged, as you know, to my grandson Barnes; in all respects a most eligible union; and Ethel's engagement to my grandson, Lord Kew, has long been settled. When we saw you in London we heard that you too were engaged to a young lady in your own rank of life—Miss Mackenzie."

Clive's departure led to more flirtations by Ethel than old Lady Kew could countenance, but Ethel had found out how undesirable a man Lord Kew was and broke the engagement so dear to her grandmother's heart.

When Clive heard that the engagement was over between Kew and Ethel he set out in haste for London. I was installed as confidant, and to me Clive said: "Mrs. Mackenzie bothers me so I hardly know where to turn, and poor little Rosey is made to write me a note about something twice a day. Oh Pen! I'm up another tree now!"

Clive met his cousin Ethel at a party or two in the ensuing weeks of the season, and at one of their meetings Ethel told him that her grandmother would not receive him. It was then that Clive thought Ethel worldly, although much of her attitude was due to the keen and unrelenting Lady Kew. The colonel and James Bennie during all this time put their two fond heads together, and Mrs. Mackenzie flattered both of them and Clive as well.

Meanwhile the Lady Clara was not happy with her Barnes. All the life and spirit had been crushed out of the girl, consigned to cruel usage, loneliness and to bitter recollections of the past. Jack Belsize, now Lord Highgate, could stand the strain no longer and took Lady Clara away from her bullying but cowardly husband. The slopement of Clara opened Ethel's eyes to the misery of loveless marriages, and the mamma of her new love, the Marquis of Farintosh, already distressed over the unpleasant notoriety of the proposed Newcome alliance, received a letter from Ethel which set her son free.

Ethel then turned to the lonely, motherless children of her brother Barnes, and found comfort in devoting herself to them. Clive married his Rosey, and his father determined to become a member of parliament in place of Sir Barnes. One night the colonel returned from his electioneering, met Clive, candle in hand. As each saw the other's face, it was so very old and worn and pale, that Colonel Newcome with quite the tenderness of old days, cried "God bless me, my boy, how ill you look! Come and warm yourself, Clive!"

"I have seen a ghost, father," Clive said, "the ghost of my youth, father, the ghost of my happiness, and the best days of my life. I saw Ethel today!"

"Nay, my boy, you mustn't talk to me so. You have the dearest little wife at home, a dear little wife and child."

"You had a wife; but that doesn't prevent other thoughts. Do you know you never spoke twice in your life about my mother? You didn't care for her?"

"I did my duty by her," interposed the colonel.

"I know, but your heart was with the other. So is mine. It's fatal, it runs in the family, father."

The shares of the Bundelcund Banking company, in which the colonel had made his fortune, now declined steadily, and at last the crash came, wiping out all the colonel's money and with it all Rosey's fortune. The impoverished Newcomes settled down first at Boulogne, and then in London, the colonel weary, feeble, white haired, Mrs. Mackenzie a perfect termagant, Rosey pale and ailing, and little Tom, my, the baby, a comfort and a care to the hard-worked Clive.

The colonel, no longer able to live under the same roof with Mrs. Mackenzie, found a home with the Grey Friars and here I saw him.

When the colonel's misfortunes were at their worst Ethel, in reading an old book, found a letter from the colonel's stepfather between the covers. It was a memorandum of a proposed bequest to Clive. Ethel at once determined to carry out this intended bequest, and so she and I hastened to Clive's home; but not even good news could soften Mrs. Mackenzie's evil temper. That was a sad and wretched night, in which Mrs. Mackenzie stormed until the poor delicate Rosey fell into the fever to which she owed her death. We soon repaired to the Grey Friars where we found that the colonel was in his last illness. He talked loudly, he gave the word of command, spoke Hindustanee as if to his men. Then he spoke words in French rapidly, seizing a hand that was near him, and crying, "tousjours, toujours!" Ethel and Clive and the nurse were in the room with him. The old man talked on rapidly for awhile; then again he would sigh and be still; once more I heard him say, hurriedly, "Take care of him when I'm in India," and then with a heart-rending voice he called for the love of his youth "Leonore, Leonore!" The patient's voice sank into faint murmurs; only a moan now and then announced that he was not asleep.

At the usual evening hour the chapel bell began to toll, and Thomas Newcome's hands outside the bed feebly beat a time. And just as the last bell struck a peculiar sweet smile shone over his face, and he lifted up his head a little, and quickly said, "Adsum," and fell back. It was the word we used at school, when names were called; and lo, he whose heart was as that of a little child, had answered to his name, and stood in the presence of the Master.

Grange-Sale and Drama

South Paris Grange held a successful fair and entertainment in their hall Thursday and Friday. Fancy articles, vegetables and refreshments were sold Thursday afternoon at decorated tables in the dining room. The stock was practically exhausted before evening and the sale did not continue Friday afternoon as expected.

A three act drama "The Village School Ma'am" was presented both evenings to large audiences. The parts had been carefully assigned and the entire cast lived up to the spirit of the story expressed through the eleven characters of various types and modes.

As the setting was strictly rural the story centered around the doings in a hamlet bringing to the front characters found in an average small town community. The road in front of the country store and post office was the location during two acts. Customers and loafers furnish comedy galore while a school ma'am and a commercial traveler brought into the community a glimpse of the outside world.

According to the story "Richard Elliot" the storekeeper (Henry Woodworth) has a flutter around the heart for "Sylvia Lennox" (Ada McAllister) a school teacher and something of a mystery. The advent of "James Graham" (Austin Stearns Jr.) with his sample case is the beginning of a plot involving the persons before mentioned, and "Ida May Alcott" a country girl, wise in her own eyes, (Lydia Sweet) whom Graham plans to entice to the city. During the course of events Graham recognizes in the school ma'am Miss Lennox, his former wife whom he deserted. No reconciliation is possible and she uses her influence to keep Ida May Alcott from the flattery of the unscrupulous man. While protecting the simple minded girl "Miss Lennox" becomes the target of the gossip in the form of "Elvira Pratt" (Mildred Irvine) a tattling dressmaker and "Mrs. Alcott" the girls fond mother, (Grace Plummer) who knows her wonderful daughter can't go wrong.

Regulation country rusties are sandwiched into the plot, furnishing clean comedy with droll acting and provincial dialogue. An old soldier "Hosea Clegg" (Herbert Woodworth) proved a typical porch warmer around the store spending his time whittling and telling strangers how he "fit" for the Union. "Sam Alcott" (Frank Plummer) suffering with a hen pecked disease but willing to loaf while on the store steps with Hosea, was a fruitful source of fun.

Other comedy characters were "Peg" (Chore Boy, Perley Shaw) and "Posie" (Florice Morse) a hired girl with short memory and always fired. Both figured in the plot as a pair of lovers starting with a "kissing bug" and ending on the verge of matrimony at the final curtain. The country parson "Rev. Mr. Flick" (A. N. Cairns) was a dignified peace maker using physical force when necessary, but generally resorted to argument. He endeavored to protect the good character of the school teacher from gossip mongers and others who received numerous occasions his dignity received jolts from the acts performed by members of his flock.

The third act was staged in the sitting room at the Alcott homestead where Graham was balking in his plan to elope with Ida May Alcott. His real character was exposed by the long suffering school teacher. Thanks to the charity of Mrs. former wife he escaped the wrath of Mrs. Alcott and others, and made a hasty exit from the community.

The play ended satisfactorily with the villain removed, all misunderstandings caused by gossip nicely adjusted and everybody happy.

Cota's orchestra furnished music both evenings for the play and for dancing at the conclusion of the drama Friday night.

A Grange item of much interest to members of the play was given by W. S. Stearns, a former master of Paris Grange viz—A list of the masters who have presided over Paris Grange since its organization to the present time. The first master, Alexander followed by G. C. ## GIRLS' SUMMER SCHOOL

Amy E. Faulkner of Shield, Pa., has purchased a 20 acre camp site on the upper shore of McWain Pond where there is a beautiful sand beach. It was bought of Fred M. Skinner of Waterford.

It is expected that the building will be up and the camp be ready to occupy by the first of next July.

The prominent business man who mistook washing fluid for sweet dew should have a guardian appointed. Both liquids were in jugs and during the excitement this grievous error was staged. Naturally a brief illness followed for the patient never indulged in homemade tonics, therefore not acclimated. He lives to tell the tale and endure considerable jostling.

FISHERMAN'S STORY

One day about the first of June, Sam, my boy says, "We have got all done planting now lets go fishing to-morrow." I says, "Can't do it; look at the apple trees to trim and the bushes to cut." "Look here, Dad," he says "I've have worked like dogs all of the spring and I say a day off will do us good." I says "Perhaps it will but it won't get the bushes cut." "Well," says Sam, "lets draw lots, if you get the longest stick twice out of three times we go." So he got the sticks. I don't know how he handled the sticks but he beat me.

So we got ready that night, got all of the different kinds of bait we could think of and every fishhook we could find. We took one old big grapple hook, big enough to hold a shark. We also got the old sheet iron ready, it is what we used to cook our dinner on, also eggs, butter and some cream and six qts. of old cider.

We got up about three o'clock, milked the cows, got our breakfast and started. We drove about five miles and when we hatched our horse it was so dark we had to use a flash light. I forgot to say we had used up one quart of cider. We took a good drink a piece, filled up two quart bottles and started. I had the big grapple hook which I done up and put in my hip pocket. All went well until I jumped over a fence when I yelled, Sam come here, quick. "What is the matter?" Sam says. "That damned grapple," I says, a pulling my pants away from my hide, "help get the thing out." "Stand still," Sam says, as he took hold of the hook and gave it a yank. I wanted to kick a hole in him but did not dare to move. Says I, "Take knife and get the thing out." But Sam says, "I don't want to cut your pants let me think." "Yes, think you damned blockhead and that hook a jabbing me every time I move."

In some way the end of the line got loose and was hanging out of my pocket and Sam got his foot hung in it. That was the finish, that hook drove in my flesh about half an inch and I was fighting mad.

Sam did at last get serious and took his knife and got it free. We got started, Sam took the grapple, as I would not carry it any more. We got along all right until Sam jumped over a mud hole or tried to but he gave a yell and landed in the mud and water half way to his knee with one foot sticking out.

"What's the matter Sam," says he. Sam had on a pair of overalls with stockings on the outside and he got the grapple between the overalls and pants and when he jumped the grapple slide down and caught him above the ankle. "Come and help get it out," says he. "Not a that mud hole," I says, "you get on dry land."

Well, Sam got out of the mud and I tried to get the hook but the bars got in his stocking and in trying to work it out I got my coat sleeve on one of the hooks and we were both caught together. "That is that mud hole," says I. "Shut up," Sam says, "and get me free." "How can I," says I, "my knife is on the same side that is bitted to you and you say you can't get at yours. I have got it," says I, "I will work your shoe and stocking." After working some time and leaving several deep scratches where the hook scraped I got it free and threw the hook on the ground. Sam said he would not carry it another step, so I took it and laid it on a stump and said I guessed we could remember where it was when we want it. I guess it is still there if some person has not set down there to rest.

We emptied one of the quart bottles and went on. We soon came to a branch in the brook where there was once an old mill. I took one branch, Sam the other and traveled a while and I came to where somebody had peeled pulpwood. I knew it was no use for if anybody were at work around there they would not leave many fish in the brook and I was right. I got a few rather small ones.

It began to rain as hard as I ever saw it. We got the dinner out but I could not build a fire it rained so hard. I heard Sam yell and looked around and he had picked-up a board and there was a snake about five feet long. I says let him alone if he is living in this God forsaken hole it is punishment enough. But Sam says he'll be darned if he could eat with any such neighbors. I couldn't start a fire so we found an old door and Sam cleaned some trout and fixed some potatoes and we got the dinner started and what a dinner we ate, forty trout, a loaf of bread, doughnuts, and cookies. We got filled at last and saw our eggs all cooked but we could not eat them so we took what crumbs there was and put with the eggs for future use and packed up and started.

If you have traveled on a brook bed that is all moss and grass after a rain you know how slippery it is. I slid down most every ledge and over most of the rocks and always landed in the brook but not always right side up. No matter how careful we were we always landed in the brook. At last I got sick of it and tied up my line and took to the bushes.

I guess Sam likes to fish better than I do for he kept on fishing. When we went to the meadow I hooked up again but we had rather poor luck. We got a few good ones and at last reached the wagon and fed the horse and ate the eggs and started for home where we arrived in good season. We were wet, tired and hungry but we had a good mess of trout and were satisfied for we had been fishing—A Fisherman.

"That is that mud hole," says I. "Shut up," Sam says, "and get me free." "How can I," says I, "my knife is on the same side that is bitted to you and you say you can't get at yours. I have got it," says I, "I will work your shoe and stocking." After working some time and leaving several deep scratches where the hook scraped I got it free and threw the hook on the ground. Sam said he would not carry it another step, so I took it and laid it on a stump and said I guessed we could remember where it was when we want it. I guess it is still there if some person has not set down there to rest.

We emptied one of the quart bottles and went on. We soon came to a branch in the brook where there was once an old mill. I took one branch, Sam the other and traveled a while and I came to where somebody had peeled pulpwood. I knew it was no use for if anybody were at work around there they would not leave many fish in the brook and I was right. I got a few rather small ones.

It began to rain as hard as I ever saw it. We got the dinner out but I could not build a fire it rained so hard. I heard Sam yell and looked around and he had picked-up a board and there was a snake about five feet long. I says let him alone if he is living in this God forsaken hole it is punishment enough. But Sam says he'll be darned if he could eat with any such neighbors. I couldn't start a fire so we found an old door and Sam cleaned some trout and fixed some potatoes and we got the dinner started and what a dinner we ate, forty trout, a loaf of bread, doughnuts, and cookies. We got filled at last and saw our eggs all cooked but we could not eat them so we took what crumbs there was and put with the eggs for future use and packed up and started.

If you have traveled on a brook bed that is all moss and grass after a rain you know how slippery it is. I slid down most every ledge and over most of the rocks and always landed in the brook but not always right side up. No matter how careful we were we always landed in the brook. At last I got sick of it and tied up my line and took to the bushes.

I guess Sam likes to fish better than I do for he kept on fishing. When we went to the meadow I hooked up again but we had rather poor luck. We got a few good ones and at last reached the wagon and fed the horse and ate the eggs and started for home where we arrived in good season. We were wet, tired and hungry but we had a good mess of trout and were satisfied for we had been fishing—A Fisherman.

Sam did at last get serious and took his knife and got it free. We got started, Sam took the grapple, as I would not carry it any more. We got along all right until Sam jumped over a mud hole or tried to but he gave a yell and landed in the mud and water half way to his knee with one foot sticking out.

"What's the matter Sam," says he. Sam had on a pair of overalls with stockings on the outside and he got the grapple between the overalls and pants and when he jumped the grapple slide down and caught him above the ankle. "Come and help get it out," says he. "Not a that mud hole," I says, "you get on dry land."

Well, Sam got out of the mud and I tried to get the hook but the bars got in his stocking and in trying to work it out I got my coat sleeve on one of the hooks and we were both caught together. "That is that mud hole," says I. "Shut up," Sam says, "and get me free." "How can I," says I, "my knife is on the same side that is bitted to you and you say you can't get at yours. ### HOUSECLEANING ON THE FARM AND

The Hoover

The Hoover cleans rugs thoroughly, without removing them from the floor, by gently beating out every bit of destructive, embedded grit. Powerful suction withdraws all the dislodged dirt. And the swiftly revolving brush not only takes up the dust and lint, but straightens the velvety nap, restores the colors and prolongs the life of your rugs. Only The Hoover cleans rugs thoroughly.

Housecleaning with The Hoover doesn't alter the regular household routine. Just leave rugs, carpet and furniture in position, connect The Hoover with an electric light socket and "run The Hoover over."

There is a Hoover model exactly suited to your needs, regardless of whether you operate your own electric plant or get your current from other sources. No difference at all in price.

HOOVER MODEL 105 ONLY $65, smaller and larger models at proportionate prices. Time payments cheerfully granted. Attachments only a small sum more.

Letter from the West

Mrs. C. D. Herrick of Norway recently received the following letter from her sister, Edith L. Pike, who went to Sarasota, Fla., by auto in company with F. H. Gallup and family in September:

"Sarasota, Fla. Oct. 21, 1922.
My dear sister Nellie: At last I will try to write you of our trip and of the town. We arrived here last Sunday afternoon; had a nice trip, although we struck some roads that were really worse than you can imagine. In places we were in ruts so deep that the lower part of the car would drag in the mud; then we would go over places where one side of the car was so much lower than the other that it seemed as though we must surely tip over. We forded streams with the water up to the hub of the wheels and crossed bridges that made us hold our breath until we were across, they were so shaky. These bad roads were all south of Washington. However, the roads in the south were not all bad, it was only in places and we got through all safe and were glad when we landed here at Sarasota.

The last three days it rained hard, so we could not pitch our tent at night but stopped at hotels. Through the day we traveled in the rain and enjoyed it in a way. The shortest day's run we made was sixty-two miles and the longest one hundred and sixty-five. We could have made longer runs when the weather and roads were good, but we liked to pitch our tent early so as to get our supper cooked and eaten and our beds made up before dark.

We left Maine September 5th and arrived here October 15th, but we were on the road only fourteen days, the rest of the time we were visiting or making side trips and sightseeing. It is about one thousand seven hundred miles from Portland, Maine, to Sarasota, but we covered a little over two thousand seven hundred miles after leaving Maine. After we got well into the South I was watching all the time for big snakes and alligators, but only saw two snakes and those were not as large as some I have seen in Helikon, when we lived there, and not a single alligator. We saw thousands of trees loaded with oranges and grapefruit, but most of them were too green to pick and all were enclosed by barbed wire fences. Did you get the cotton I sent you? I picked just a few balls on the way down as I thought you might like one. Sarasota is a comparatively new town, seven years ago cows used to be pastured on what is now the main avenue in the business section. There are nice stores and several churches and hotels here and this winter they are going to put up two one million dollar hotels. They already have seventeen miles of paved streets and are adding more, and have put in a new electric lighting system so you see it will soon be quite a city. We went bathing on the beach the other day and had a fine time. It has been pretty warm here, but they tell us that within ten days it will be quite cool nights. One would like to have five or ten thousand dollars to invest down here as real estate is increasing in value very rapidly. We have met some very nice people here and tomorrow we have been invited to go on a picnic to a town about eighteen miles from here. There will be a picnic dinner and bathing and the ride home in the evening by auto, think it will be quite a pleasant affair.

Your letter was here when I arrived and I was so glad to get it. Home was as well or better than usual and will write again soon. Lovingly, Lue."

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is a Tonic and Blood Purifier, and acts through the blood upon the mucous surfaces of the body, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

HUSBAND'S STORY WILL AMAZE NORWAY

He says: "Adler-ika helped my wife for gas on stomach and sour stomach in TWENTY MINUTES. It works beyond greatest expectations." Adler-ika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel removing foul matter which poisoned stomach. Brings out all gasses and sour, decaying food. EXCELLENT for chronic constipation. Guards against appendicitis. Adler-ika removes matter you never thought was in your system and which may have been poisoning you for months. Frank Kimball, Druggist.

BATES—WEST PARIS

Federated Sale
The Federated Ladies Aid were very successful with their Harvest dinner and sale last Thursday. The dinner and supper were all that could be expected and the price ridiculously cheap.

The sale table was decorated with black and orange crepe paper to keep in line with the Halloween season. On the table was a great variety of aprons in the latest styles also fancy work, vegetables, canned fruit and candy hanging on the wall back of the table were two good quilts.

Farther on down the hall was another table trimmed with pink and green crepe paper laden with a large variety of fancy articles, useful, novelties and potted plants and slips on the wall back of this table hung a quilt fashioned in the red cross design except the corners were made of blue instead of red and up over that were the words "Dorcas Class" and other decorations in pink and green also another smaller table filled with home made candy and pop corn, all being the result of Mrs. Flavin's Sunday School class of young ladies.

The free entertainment in the evening was a mixed program of readings by Mrs. Flavin, Lula Herrick and Edith Cash, and music by a four piece orchestra Olga McKean, piano, Sylvia McKean, Margaret Lane, violin, also a duet by Doris Richardson and Ruth Cole, a trio by Doris, Ruth and Thelma Verge and solos by Sylvia McKean and Evelyn Small. Evelyn sang an encore in Finnish. All of which was very interesting and entertaining. After the program games were played which caused a good lot of enjoyment. A good sum was realized.

Layman's Sunday was observed at the Universalist church Sunday as planned. Mr. Hunt, President of the Universalist Comrades gave the address. Three young men of the local church assisted. Abner Mann conducted the service and offered prayer. Harold Perham read the scripture and Raymond Chase read the responsive psalm. A large audience was in attendance and listened with interest to the message of the four "Comrades of the Christ Crucified".

Sunday evening in the Baptist church G. W. Hinckley of Goodwill Farm gave a very fine sermon on "Christ in the Home" and proved that there would be peace in all of the earth if Christ was admitted into all the homes. The meeting was under the auspices of the W. G. T. U. A young peoples chorus led the congregation in singing.

Mrs. Myra T. Woodworth and daughter June of South Paris visited her aunt, Mrs. S. T. White a few days this week.

Claims Honors of Columbus.
And now old sea-tanned, weather-scarred John Scovio lumbers out of the grave he has occupied for some 400 years to start a Cook-Pearcy controversy with the late Christopher Columbus. Through his present-day spokesman, Dr. Sofus Larsen, librarian of the University of Copenhagen, old John, a Dano-Norwegian navigator, claims he beat Columbus to America by 16 years. In a recent publication Doctor Larsen claims Scovio sailed by way of Greenland and Iceland and landed on the mainland of Labrador in 1476. Doctor Larsen's work has been translated by J. Christian Bay, head of the medical reference section of the John C. O'Brien Library, Chicago, who says he believes Scovio's claim is authentically established.

A subscriber at Rockwood says: "Sorry I neglected your warning to remit—can't sleep nights till I get the paper. Please send the Oct. 27th number."
